Through fortunate circumstances, numerous pieces of the late 13th and early 14th century interior design from the former Premonstratensian convent in Altenberg an der Lahn have survived. This unique ensemble is reunited in the exhibition for the first time since the cloister closed at the beginning of the 19th century.

Visitors to the exhibition and readers of the catalogue can follow the fascinating harmony of the aesthetic image program and learn the function of the individual components that provide meaning within this specific altarpiece design. The volume of accompanying essays combines the findings of the Passavant Kolloquium, a recent colloquium on this medieval high altarpiece made north of the Alps.
