Not illustrated. 1820 Excerpt: ...alternately, and be elected, and receive the same salary as Ministers of other Country Parishes. The Church was built of wood near a large creek, called the half-way-swamp, on the public road from Charleston to Columbia, by M'Cord's ferry. It was 40 feet long by 30 wide. The Revi Paul Turquand was the only settled Minister in this Parish before the Revolutionary War, We are indebted to the politeness of Col. Edward Richardson, for some account of this gentleman. Mr. Turquand was born in London of French ancestors, in 1735. At the age of 14 or 15, his father was desirous that he should study Physic, but having been seriously impressed with the importance of religion, he had determined to devote himself to the Ministry, in the Church of England. To avoid a Profession, which neither his heart nor his judgement approved, he clandestinely left his Parents and came to Carolina. Here he flattered himself that be could indulge his pious inclinations,' and prepare himself for Holy Orders. Soon after his arrival he went to George-Town, and took charge of a School. Having prepared himself for the Ministry, he went to England in 1761, and received Ordination. On his return to Carolina he remained some years in George-Town, and then removed to St. Matthew's, to take upon him the duties of the cure, April 28, 1766. He continued to officiate until 1777, when he went to the Mississippi. The Indians having joined the British in their War with the Colonies, Mr. Turquand was prevented from returning until 1785, when he resumed his Ministerial labours, and continued them until Sept. 18, 1786, when he died. ' Orangeburgh was settled by a colony of Germans in the year 1735. lu 1738 the Rev John Giessendanner settled there. He was a Minister of the Lutheran Church, but in 1749 he...
